Get involved in designing the National Care Service

The National Care Service is the new way that people will get health and social care services.

Social care is services that support people with daily living so they can be as independent as possible.

It is likely that everyone in Scotland will be involved in the National Care Service at some point in their lives.

You may need to use its services or have family or friends who do, or you may work in it.

We want to have a National Care Service that gives people in Scotland the care they need.

To do that, we need to hear what people think.

This is what co-design means - everyone working together to understand each other's needs and make sure we design the right thing.

This will make sure we get a future organisation that works for everyone.

We are looking for people to help us understand:

- what changes are needed
- if these changes are possible

We want to hear from you.

Here are two ways to take part.

1. Lived Experience Experts Panel

If you are aged over 18 and live in Scotland and have views on how you think the future National Care Service should look, you can apply to take part in our Lived Experience Experts Panel.

Lived experience means what is happening to people and what they are going through.

The Lived Experience Experts Panel will be made up of people who have real experience of needing, using or giving social care support in Scotland.

Your expertise will shape what the National Care Service is like and help to make sure we are working with the right people, in the right way.

Expertise means skills and knowledge.

The Lived Experience Experts Panel will take part in different kinds of research like:

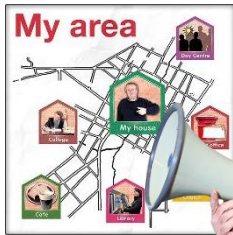

- surveys
- being interviewed
- helping us come up with ideas about what changes we might make
- helping us understand what our evidence is telling us
- helping us understand if the suggestions made will bring about the changes needed within health and social care that people have asked for

We will let you know when research and design activities are happening.

You can decide if you want to take part or not.

The first things we will be thinking about are:

- information sharing
- rights and responsibilities

- local health and social care support
- making sure my voice is heard
- valuing the workforce

Do not worry if these topics do not feel relevant to you and your experience. We will look at different things in the future that you might be more interested in.

You will be able to join the panel at any time to take part in co-design activities.

We are not asking children under 18 to join the Lived Experience Experts Panel right now.

In the future we will arrange events for specific groups to take part in co-design – for example:

- children, young people and their families
- care experienced people
- young carers
- children with disabilities

We will arrange the events in a way that best suit the group we are working with.

This will make sure everyone feels comfortable and we can get the best out of the work.

We are grateful for any help you can give us with this important work.

If you would like to be part of the Lived Experience Experts Panel you can apply online.

We want to make sure the panel has a wide range of people with different backgrounds and experiences.

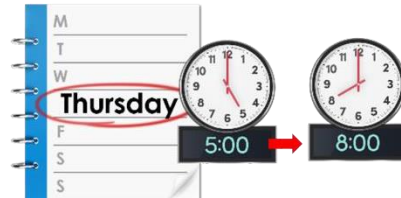

If you need help to fill in your application, please contact our helpline on: 0808 196 1507

It is free to call from mobile phones and landlines.

The helpline will be staffed by members of the National Care Service team on:

- Wednesday and Friday from 10am to 1pm

- Thursday from 5pm to 8pm

- Saturday from 2pm to 5pm

In your application, we will ask questions about:

- you and your experience of social care in Scotland
- which things you are interested in (from pages 3 and 4)

You can apply to join the panel at any time.

After you apply we will:

- contact you to offer you a place on the panel now
- or let you know that we will be in touch at a later date with more chances to join.

We will be adding things and new ways to get involved over the coming months and years.

2. Stakeholder Register

If you represent an organisation in Scotland with an interest in health and social care you can apply to take part in our Stakeholder Register.

That is why we are creating a National Care Service Stakeholder Register – so we can build an understanding of which organisations want to take part in future co-design activities.

We have already been working with lots of organisations on the development of the National Care Service up to now, but we still want to hear from both existing partners and new ones.

If you would like to register your organisation's interest in joining this register, please fill in an application online.

In this application form we will ask you about your organisation's experience of social care in Scotland.

Then we will contact you to let you know when activities for stakeholders are coming up.

If you need help to fill in your application, please call our free helpline on: 0808 196 1507.

The helpline will be open and staffed at the times detailed on page 6.

Thank you for your interest.

We look forward to hearing from you.
